ARDONIA WON HOME ECONOMICS BANNER—NOW HOME BUREAU

Now 420 Members in County—Excellent Speakers Featured Closing Meeting of Drive Saturday at Wiltwyck.

Saturday saw the round-up in the Home Economics Association drive for members, or the "Home Bureau," as it prefers to be known in the future. To close this successful campaign there was almost an entire day of meetings at Wiltwyck Inn Hall, beginning at eleven o'clock in the morning and closing between four and five o'clock in the afternoon. Mrs. William A Warren, president of the Association, presided, and she certainly is an enthusing presiding officer. She cordially welcomed all to the sessions and during her words of welcome said had she had taken as the slogan for the Association four things represeented by the words, "Inspiration, Vision, Organization and Co-operation." After enlarging a little upon this timely slogan, she introduced the first speaker at the morning session, Mrs. A E. Searing, (the first county chairman), who spoke on "The Development of Home Economics Work in Ulster County," a formidable title, which proved to be the shell of a rich kernel of thought and that "vision" of which her daughter had spoken.

Mrs. Searing called to the attention of the women before her that it was a master-stroke on the part of Food Administrator Hoover, to get the women of the country to co-operate in the saving of food during the war, and the results had been amazing. The asked-for co-operation which had been given voluntarily had doubled our quota of wheat for the period of necessity which fact would go down in history as one of the greatest of human achievements. And in its details this achievement had been that of the women of our country. But while the details had been worked out by the women, so much of the work had also been planned and done by the men, that Mrs. Searing called the attention of all present to the vital fact, that in that as in all of the great achievements of the world, things had been brought to pass by men and women. And throughout her talk, Mrs. Searing laid emphasis upon this fact, that the best and greatest world's work calls for what we now term "Team" work between men and women.

After recalling the development from immediately needed food conservation gatherings into community centers and a complete organization of effort, Mrs. Searing expressed the thought that it was resulting in the biggest forward civilization movement, the betterment of the homes. While it was the organization of the woman's suffrage body in Ulster county that had come to the rescue when the food conservation call first came, since which time the women of the state have acquired the privilege of voting, Mrs. Searing warned her hearers that it would not be "party politics" that would get them or any other right-minded body of men and women anywhere. Nor need the women think that they could reform the men in politics. There are things which for the betterment of the homes may require legislation. There are thousands of men, independent of party politics in the land today, who, while they may be in the minority, are anxious for the best in our homes and our whole land today. What Mrs. Searing did advise was that the women should get hold of this well-wishing minority of men and through team work with them it would be possible to achieve some of our home requirements: good, pure food, sanitary health conditions, the highest moral conditions, the most approved educational facilities. All of these needs would come under the head of "Home Economics," the speaker considered, and if the women of the country wanted those or any other things hard enough they would get them. Of that Mrs. Searing was sure. The science of home-making the speaker considered in its sturdy infancy, but expressed the hope and belief that all present would live to see the day when it had reached a well-rounded maturity in our fair land.

The next speaker was Miss Jennie C. Jones, assistant state leader of the Home Economics Association, whose topic was "Finding of Human Values in County Work." And Miss Jones found very real human values in the homes visited in her part of the county work, but in more than one instance these values seemed to have been trodden under foot and lost sight of at the bottom of the ruts eaten into by men and women living strenuous lives on the farms. Four things she considered as necessary to a fully rounded life: work, play, love, worship and it was anything but a rounded life that recognized only the first of these as necessary. To develop the other three and see that they had their part in home life, Miss Jones counted the woman's job. In fact, she said she did like the boy's definition of a "woman," particularly in her relation to the home life. Asked by the teacher in the little red school house what part of speech "Woman" was, the prompt answer was, "She isn't no part of speech! She's the whole blame thing!" Through this Home Bureau work, Miss Jones prophesied that the real human values, especially in the rural districts would be cultivated and developed into that true humanity which is interested in all that should interest humanity, and which alone will defeat selfishness.

During the intermission at noon, the county and city representatives and the speakers enjoyed luncheon at the Inn.

The afternoon session convened at 2 o'clock, when Mrs. Warren graciously introduced Mrs. Brigden, president of the Cortland County Home Bureau. The speaker prefaced her remarks by reciting a little poem, "The Little Houses," a man's appreciation of what womenkind has done for the world, through the home. "Home Building," was the theme of Mrs. Brigden's talk, and she likened the Home Bureau movement in its relation to the home, to a grat electric system, with its power house typified by the university from which runs the live wires, through the stations of the Home Bureaus to light the tiny individual bulbs in every home. The desire for help was the little button which pushed would turn on, into the home, from the far-away power house, the light of information and help.

Mrs. Brigden's inspiring talk was followed by an open forum, wherein two minute reports were given as follows:—

The last speaker for the afternoon was M. C. Burritt, vice director of extension work in New York state, who said he came to the meeting of the day to receive rather than to give. He wanted to become acquainted with the home bureau people first hand and felt most amply repaid for the journey and the postponing of another engagement. He was especially impressed with the unanimity of thought of all of the speakers in regard to the value of home making. The speaker considered some of the compensations of the recent war to be new estimates of the true things of life, the most important things: the realization of new possibilities in all of our lives, among which stood out prominently the part which women will take in the world's work. And with their new privileges and opportunities, he warned his hearers would come new obligations and responsibilities. Nowhere does one find the business and the home as closely interwoven as on the farm. But to be successful the home and the farm must be in partnership, and a just and equitable one. The speaker said he would hate to risk asking how many women present had a joint bankbook or check account with their husbands, yet that was but fair in such a joint business as the farm and the home. It was time that the farmer and his wife made up, as in partners in other businesses, a budget of expenses for the year, that they might more efficiently and effectively and fairly work out their joint living. And as there should be a partnership between the farm and the home, Mr. Burritt believed also there should be a partnership between the farm bureau and the home bureau. In summing up his interesting and well received out addresses, Mr. Burritt said he wanted to leave two key words with his audience; "home" and "community," both of which have taken on a new meaning and significance since the war.

At the close of Mr. Burritt's address, Mrs. Warren announced the result of the membership campaign, which had been in progress throughout the county. The various township community centers were rated according to the percentage of members secured in relation to the quota given them, and the result was as follows:

Ardonia, 110 per cent.
West Shokan, 66 per cent.
Stone Ridge, 48 per cent.
Rosendale and Hurley, tied, 40 per cent.
Ailligerville, 38 per cent.

This means a total of 420 members in Ulster county.

Mrs. Warren presented the membership banner to Mrs. Seymour Terwilliger, chairman of the Ardonia committee, who accepted it for her community. There has been the greatest possible interest in the campaign and also in the work of the Home Economics Association in Ardonia, where there are several families whose mothers do not speak English. Yet the school had taken such pride in the community movement that seven of the older girls in the school joined for their mothers, thus materially helping their community to win the much coveted banner. Special mention should also be made of the Ailligerville committee, which was organized only at the beginning of the campaign and yet which secured fifth place in the list of membership winning committees.

Before the close of the meeting a motion was passed changing the name of the organization from "Ulster County Home Economics Association" to "Ulster County Home Bureau." This was done in order that the local organization may fall in line with all of the other similar organizations in the county. Before closing Mrs. Warren expressed for all their appreciation of Miss Stuart's efforts in this campaign as in all other work of the Home Bureau.

GLASS FEARS LOAN FAILURE

Secretary of Treasury Appeals Direct to People to Complete Work So Nearly Finished by Our Soldiers.

Secretary of the Federal Treasury Glass is frankly apprehensive encerning the Victory Liberty Loan. In the hope of arousing people to the seriousness of the consequences should they fail to put it over, the secretary has sent the following telegraphic appeal to the newspapers throughout the country:

Washington, D. C.,
5:30 p. m., May 3, 1919.

Freeman, Kingston, N. Y.

"The Victory Liberty Loan campaign is two-thirds over but subscriptions have been reported for little more than one-third of the loan.

"It is inconceivable that the American people who with heart and soul waged the fight for freedom will permit this loan of victory and thanksgiving to fail.

"Our sons gave of their health, of their strength and of their lives that freedom might not perish. There are one and a half million American boys in France and Germany. Now that the war is ended it would be as reasonable for them to dishonor the nation by deserting the flag as for the nation to dishonor itself by deserting them. Is it a large thing that we are asked to lend our money to pay the cost of victory? Is American money less willing than American manhood?

"Let everyone of the millions who have bought Liberty bonds buy Victory notes and success is sure.

"CARTER GLASS,
"Secretary of the Treasury."

COMMON COUNCIL MEETS TUESDAY

The regular monthly meeting of the common council will be held Tuesday evening. It had been rumored that the council would not meet that evening owing to the O'Ryan lecture in the high school. Under the charter the meeting night of the council is fixed at the first Tuesday of the month. The only thing that will prevent the regular meeting is lack of a quorum.

It is believed that the question of permitting Sunday movies and Sunday baseball will come up at that time. That there is to be a determined opposition is shown by the attitude of the city churches, which are appointing representatives to appear before the council and object to the passage of an ordinance such as proposed.

There seems to be a wrong impression regarding Sunday baseball. Sunday baseball is played each summer in Kingston and vicinity, but under the law no admission could be charged. The proposed ordinance would allow an admission fee to be charged. The usual practice in the past has been to pass the hat or sell score cards to raise funds to defray expenses.

The Dorcas Players.

The Dorcas Society of Port Ewen are becoming famous in the dramatic line. They have presented the two act drama, "The Peabody Pew," five times and each time have been greeted with large and appreciative audiences. This performance will be given in the chapel of the Rondout Presbyterian Church on Wednesday evening, May 7, under the auspices of the Women's Missionary Society.

WHY THERE WAS LACK OF WATER

Sunday Morning a Bad Break Occurred in High Pressure Main on Carter Farm—City Supplied From Low Pressure Line.

Residents on the high points found themselves without water Sunday afternoon and evening, and when the water did flow from the faucets the pressure was extremely low. Housewives met with a disagreeable surprise this morning when they prepared to do the Monday wash, and found that little if any water was to be had.

The trouble was all occasioned by a bad break in the 20 inch high pressure main Sunday morning about 11 o'clock on the Carter farm. The break was so bad that Superintendent Harrison of the water department found it necessary to shut off the water and to supply the city from the low pressure main.

The break is located in quick sand and as fast as a hole was excavated ground would cave in. This made it necessary to use sheathing to prevent the excavation from filling up. Superintendent Harrison and a force of men worked all day Sunday and last night making repairs and expected to have them completed by noon today.

Owing to the fact that the break occurred on Sunday it was impossible to notify the water users throughout the city. Superintendent Harrison stated this morning that he knew it had caused great inconvenience and was extremely sorry that it had been impossible to notify the public before shuttingoff the high pressure line. He would not have done so if he could have avoided it but the break was of such a nature that he had to do so at once.

MAYOR PROCLAIMS CLEAN-UP WEEK

May 5-10, Inclusive, Designated as Time to Free City From Rubbish and Refuse—Fire Prevention Day May 9.

Citizens of Kingston:

It has become an established custom in cities where civic pride abounds to have an annual clean-up week and a fire-prevention day.

The united co-operation of the people of a city in such a campaign produces beneficial and worth-while results.

It develops civic interest and makes a city safer and more cleanly and attractive, and raises it to a higher and a healthier plane.

Our city was once burned under the order of an enemy general, and it caused our people of that and of succeeding generations to be fired with a strong feeling of indignation at the mere thought of it. The fire losses in our city since said time have been many times in value the destruction then and thus wrought, and have been occasioned by the orders of General Carelessness.

Now, therefore, I, Palmer Canfield, Jr., as mayor of the city of Kingston, N. Y., do hereby officially proclaim the week of May 5-10th, inclusive, to be "Clean-up Week," and Friday, May 9th, to be "Fire Prevention Day" in our city.

Let everyone ally themselves with the movement and give our city a dose of cleanliness that will be curative and preventative in its results.

All householders are urged to free their homes and yards of all rubbish and useless combustible materials, and to place the worthless refuse in receptacles on the street on the usual collection days.

All can and should clean-up. All who can should assist-up wherever necessary. All should concern themselves with the responsibility of preventing fire losses. Remember, Kingston is your home city.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand this fifth day of May, in the year nineteen hundred and nineteen.

PALMER CANFIELD, Jr.,
Mayor.

"ANDY" WALKER TOOK A HEADER

Motorcycle Cop had Narrow Escape from Serious Injury Sunday Afternoon when Hurled From his Machine.

Motorcycle Officer Andrew Walker of the police department, had a narrow escape from serious injury Sunday afternoon when he was hurled over the handle bars of his motorcycle on Washington avenue. He escaped with a badly skinned hand and a bruised body. Today he was busy making repairs to the motorcycle.

Sunday he was on duty on the motorcycle watching for speeders and was working in the vicinity of the Washington avenue viaduct. He saw an auto coming along at a speed of close to 30 miles an hour and set chase. He reached Hurley avenue when a man from Catskill driving an auto turned into Washington avenue in front of him. Officer Walker did what was possible to avoid a collision but his forward wheel struck the rear wheel of the auto hurling "Andy" over the handle bars. That he was not more seriously injured was a miracle.

The motorcycle had the front fork bent and was otherwise damaged.

BYRD SENTENCE PUT OVER UNTIL THURSDAY AFTERNOON

Defense Secures Time to Prepare Affidavits After Consultation With Court and Prosecution—Prisoner Takes Matters Coolly.

James M. Byrd, the negro, whom the jury in county court found guilty of murder in the first degree last Saturday at midnight, was not sentenced this morning as was expected. There was a fair sized attendance when at 10 o'clock, Clerk Loughran announced the coming of Judge Fowler, and immediately after N. Frank O'Reilly, attorney for Byrd stated, "Your Honor, defendant's counsel has in course of preparation certain affidavits to set aside the verdict. They could not be prepared before 12 o'clock, and I ask that sentence be deferred until then."

District Attorney Traver asked that The People be given an opportunity to see the affidavits, and that a copy of them be also served on the prosecution so that they can have time to make an examination of their contents and make answering affidavits. He asked for a reasonable time.

After some talk between the Court, the district attorney and Mr. O'Reilly it was finally decided to defer pronouncing of sentence until 5 p. m. Thursday. Byrd, who was seated between Undersheriff Haulenbeck and Night Jailor Jocelyn, did not seem to be nervous.

From what was said by the district attorney to the Court, the inference is that the affidavits will relate to some talk or action by a juror or jurors.

VICTORY LOAN WORKERS ACTIVE

Chairman DeWitt Promises Surprises From Limit Club—Teams Competing for War Trophies.

The work of canvassing the city for the Victory Loan is going on steadily, the teams putting forth their best efforts because of the slow response thus far. Chairman W. H. Van Slyke and the industrial committee will hold meetings at the different plants of the city on Wednesday and Thursday.

This evening the workers and team captains will hold another meeting at the Y. M. C. A., and it is expected their reports will show that Kingston has realized the serious consequences that might ensue if all communities do not raise their quotas.

Chairman DeWitt addresses the following to all captains of teams in the house to house canvass:

Please attend meeting of captains and team workers this evening at 8 sharp at Y. M. C. A. headquarters and bring along reports and all members of your team not busy.

The limit club, Herbert Carl, chairman, will have a surprise for many of the wards in the form of large subscriptions which will be added to the ward captains' figures and thus put them in the running for the German helmets to be awarded Saturday night at end of drive.

Impress every one that conditions are serious and the outlook for Kingston reaching its quota still doubtful.

We MUST go "over" again.
WILLIAM C. DE WITT,
Chairman House-to-House Canvass Victory Loan.

SUNDAY MOVIE PUBLIC HEARING

No Need To Miss Lecture Tuesday—Mayor To Insist on Public Hearing if Any Ordinance Introduced In Council.

There will be a regular meeting of the Common Council Tuesday night. It is doubtful, however, whether any final action will be taken in regard to Sunday baseball or Sunday movies. Mayor Canfield stated to-day that he would veto any ordinance passed unless there was a public hearing at which everyone interested would be given the fullest opportunity to present their views in reference to the matter. If an ordinance should be introduced on Tuesday night it would be necessary for the Common Council to fix a time for such a hearing. Many of the city officials and others interested desire to attend the General O'Ryan lecture on Tuesday night. Mayor Canfield stated that no one should keep away from the lecture from the fear that they might not have an opportunity to be heard before the council in reference to these questions.

BYRD IS A WOOD CARVER

Two Jack Knives Found in County Jail—How Jurors Arrived at "Intent to Kill"—Byrd Took Bad News With a Gulp.

Hearing a rumor that Byrd, the negro now found guilty of murder had carved out of a piece of wood a tombstone, a reporter of The Freeman, visited the jail about 9 o'clock Friday night to look at the alleged tombstone with Sheriff Smith. Instead of finding one he saw that on the pine board top of a long, narrow table in the cell corridor, where Byrd and other prisoners exercise when not locked in their cell, Byrd had carved in a good-sized square his name "J. M. Byrd" on a curve, the figures "1894," being the year of his birth, and underneath a good-sized circle with a scroll on top, while an American flag was cut into the wood alongside of the circle. Byrd was asked if that was to represent his tombstone and if he was going to carve the date of his death in the circle, and he replied, "No sir, not for me." He was told by The Freeman reporter that the American flag in square was flying the wrong way and it indicated a sign of distress, and D'Almo, a prisoner in the corridor remarked, "That's all right, ain't Slim in distress?" This sally brought a hearty laugh from "Slim," that being Byrd's nickname in jail, and also a laugh from the other prisoners in the corridor. Besides the panel carved with Byrd's name, there are other panels, one for Pat Rock, awaiting grand jury action. One for Frank DuBois, now in Dannemora, and some for other jail inmates. Now that the jury has found him guilty Byrd might complete the panel by carving in the date set for his electrocution. He was in good spirits when seen by the reporter Friday night and singing with John Bailey, also colored, and other prisoners camp meeting songs. The knife used to do he carving was said to belong to Rock.

Byrd Gave a Gulp.

Seth Jocelyn, night jailer, when asked how Byrd took the news Friday night that the jury had found him guilty in the first degree said the prisoner when told of the verdict by him gave a gulp and was downcast, but after being in the court room about twenty minutes, before Judge Fowler arrived Byrd regained his usual composure and smiled. After Byrd was taken back to the jail Jailer Jocelyn made a search of Byrd's cell and found an old jack knife with a fairly good blade, the edge of which had been nicked like a saw blade. Another knife, said to belong to Pat Rock, a jail inmate, and which it was said had been used by Byrd to do the carving of panels on the top of a table in the cell corridor was also confiscated.

One of the jurors who was asked by a reporter of The Freeman if there was any difficulty to determine if there was any intent to kill on the part of Byrd, said that considerable time was taken up discussing that end of the case. It was finally decided that Byrd when he put his hand in his pocket and got out the knife which with the stabbing was done he had sufficient time to consider and thus to intend to kill.

The arrangement and selection of house furnishings will be emphasized by exhibits. Attractive preserved foods in various forms stimulate the housewife to go thou and do likewise, or better, and offer suggestion for dainty gifts to friends and relatives. An exhibit of foods showing their comparative values to the body convinces the housewife that food must be bought in terms of nutritive value as well as in pounds and quarts, if her dollars are to be wisely spent. The Victory special is being sent out over several railroads in the state by the New York state college of agriculture in co-operation with the United States Railroad administration in the interests of the home makers of the state. Hundreds of women of the state have already become familiar with the instruction given by the train and will look forward to its visiting their town or one suddenly near that they may reach it.

"The Woman in the Case"

Your sympathy turns to the unfortunate Cinderella who drudges in a stifling kitchen with its old-fashioned coal range.

The heroine, cool and unruffled, is telling her the advantages of the New Perfection Oil Cook Stove—how it keeps the kitchen clean and cool, how it eliminates the drudgery of fire tending and ashes, how it gives comfort equal to gas at kerosene cost.

Its Long Blue Chimney turns all the oil into odorless, smokeless heat instantly. The flame is regulated like gas—on or off, high or low. And it cooks perfectly.

You, too, should have a New Perfection stove. Also, a New Perfection Water Heater. It means steaming hot water without a hot range. At all dealers.

Famous Wyoming Landmark.

The Devil's Tower is 12 miles by road from Moorcroft, Wyo. This conspicuous mass of rock flung up by some ancient earth cataclysm rises 600 feet above a rounded ridge of sedimentary rocks, which itself rises 600 feet above the Belle Fouche river. It was useful to the aborigines as a landmark from which to direct their courses across the plains. Later on the white pioneers of civilization in their exploration of the great northwest also used it as a landmark. Still later the military leaders in the Sioux and Crow Indian country during the Indian wars of the last century directed their marches by the aid of this ever-present tower, for it is visible in some directions for nearly 100 miles.

It now appears that those stories of friendly feeling between natives of Rhineland and the American doughboys were due to efforts of an organized German propaganda to win over our soldiers with smiles and flatter The effort having failed, comradeship being impossible after all that had gone before the Germans devoted themselves to other schemes

Sir Oliver Lodge and Sir William Crookes English scientists and converts to what is called spiritualism will, now that they are dead be expected by friends of the same belief to transmit messages to this lower sphere This calls to mind the fact that, though William James, the American psychologist, was said to promise to put a message across if he could, no such result followed his death

RESTORATION OF ST SOPHIA

There is good reason for the demand of Greek prelates, widely echoed in the Christian world that St. Sophia be made once more a Christian Church Whatever the victorious Allies in conference of the League of Nations at a later day may do with Constantinople, the old Church of St Sophia ought to be restored to the faith of those who built the rare specimen of Byzantine architecture which now represents the crowning glory of a style peculiarly adapted to its Near East environment This would not be an act of spoliation or tyrannical seizure by the conquerors but a simple measure of restitution and therefore indisputably just It is true that St Sophia has been a Mohammedan shrine for more than four centuries, but it had been a Christian church for many more centuries In 1453 the Turks seized it as part of their conquered spoils amid scenes of bestial violence Turning to Gibbon's account of the pillage of Constantinople after the city had been subdued by the arms of Mahomet II, we read:

The victorious Turks rushed through the breaches of the inner wall. In the first heat of the pursuit about two thousand Christians were put to the sword. The trembling inhabitants flocked together in the streets like a herd of timid animals From every part of the capital they flowed into the church of St. Sophia. In the space of an hour the sanctuary, the choir, the nave, the upper and lower galleries, were filled with the multitude of fathers and husbands, of women and children, of priests, monks, and religious virgins The doors were barred on the inside, and they sought protection from the sacred dome Their confidence was founded on the prophecy of an enthusiast that one day the Turks would enter Constantinople and pursue the Romans as far as the column of Constantine in the square before St. Sophia, but that an angel would then descend from heaven with a sword in his hand and would deliver the empire. While they expected the descent of the angel the doors were broken open with axes In the space of an hour the multitude of captives were bound. The senators were linked with their slaves; the prelates with the porters of the church; and the young men of the plebian class with noble maids In this common captivity the ties of nature were cast asunder, and the inexorable soldier was careless of the father's groans, the tears of the mother and the lamentations of the children. Above sixty thousands of this devoted people were transported from the city, exchanged or sold, and dispersed in remote servitude through the Ottoman empire

The restoration after 465 years of the church which was the theatre of such horrors is demanded of the present victors if they believe in simple justice Reverdies. A Parsee now lecturing in this country who has been witness of Mohammedan fanaticism in his native India expresses the hope that St. Sophia will not be taken from the Mohammedans because that would result in "holy war" and great bloodshed. But civilization does not usually leave pirates in possession of their loot merely in order to forestall bloody resistance.

A message to farmers about "Satisfaction guaranteed"

WE say "satisfaction guaranteed" a good deal. We would like to have you know what we mean by that phrase. Satisfaction in clothes means to us exactly what it means to you; you decide it.

All merchandise made by human hands and sold at any store may have defects; none of us are infallible; we can't possibly guarantee merchandise, except that we can guarantee tha t

Hart Schaffner & Marx clothes are all-wool and stylish

But what we can guarantee is that the clothes will satisfy, and if for any reason they don't—we'll make good.

Naturally we have to be pretty careful about the goods we sell, or we couldn't keep on guaranteeing satisfaction on our goods. If anything doesn't satisfy you, we give your money back as much for your sake as for ours; we don't care to keep any money we don't give value for.

"Satisfaction guaranteed" is simply value-giving, and we believe you'll like the spirit at this store.

The Stroller Hears the Luxury Tax Discussed—It Seems to Have Hit the Kiddies About As Hard As Any—Even Sodas Jump In Price.

"One thing I can't understand," remarked the customer, with a smile, as he laid down the paper he was reading. "What's that?" asked the busy barber. "Why this luxury tax did not include shaving soap," explained the customer. "Pshaw, that's easy," retorted the barber, "for congress figured that that if they taxed the soap every one would let their whiskers sprout. You'd look sweet with a crop. Your friends wouldn't be able to tell you from a Bolsheviki."

"Well, soap is a luxury," argued the customer.

"It sure must be," replied the barber, "judging from the looks of some people, for soap and them don't even have a speaking acquaintance."

"I see that some of the local thirst emporiums have boosted the price of ice cream sodas to 15 cents a throw," said the customer, "and that is not counting the luxury tax either."

"Maybe it's to repay them for the trouble in collecting the tax," suggested the barber with a grin. He added "Taking this luxury tax by and large to my mind it has hit the kiddies about the hardest of any."

"How so?" asked the customer.

"Why in the first place when the baseball season opened up and the back lots team started to play they found that there was no such a thing as a nickel ball on the market, but the cheapest was a dime. The old quarter baseball now sells for half a dollar, and not only that but baseball bats and gloves have also doubled in price."

"First I knew it," interrupted the customer.

"That's because you have no kids of your own who like to play baseball after school," retorted the barber, "and then the present tax and price hosting on ice cream and ice cream sodas is more woe in their cups."

"I would not say a thing," continued the barber, "if they soaked the tax on us older guys, but the poor kid who only has a nickel, and who when he gets a dime thinks he is head of the Standard Oil, why it hits him in the wrong spot."

"That's so too," agreed the customer thoughtfully.

"... and other taxes are all right in a way," said the barber, "but they ought to lay off the kids."

FIRST SWIM OF THE SEASON.

It Nearly Proved Disastrous for Richard DuBois.

Sunday was an ideal spring day with the atmosphere warm and comfortable. That fact led Richard Du... of Hasratty street to decide it was time to have his first swim of the season. Accordingly he jumped aboard at Kingston Point and was enjoying himself when seized with a cramp. Fortunately for Richard his friend, Peter Gorman, of Newkirk avenue, was on hand, and Peter leaped in and saved Richard from drowning.

TIPS ON HOW TO BUY VICTORY NOTES

Here are some important points of information for subscribers to the Victory Loan. If you will heed the following tips it will facilitate the work of putting over the Victory Loan:

1. If you wish to subscribe to a $50 or a $100 Victory Liberty Note you should buy a coupon book upon which payments may be made either weekly, monthly or on the Government plan, as you may desire.

2. If you buy a coupon book, do not, in addition, sign a subscription blank for the same note.

3. Write your name and address plainly and spell your name to the canvasser and be sure to indicate the name of the bank where you wish to make your payments. If this is a branch of some bank, give the address of the branch and go there at once.

4. Each blank you sign is your pledge to buy Notes to the amount indicated. Do not sign more than one blank for the same Note.

5. You cannot help a canvasser obtain credit by giving him a subscription for a Note or Coupon Book which you have already bought.

6. Do not hesitate to give your first payment to an authorized canvasser. Have him show you his card, and he will give you an official receipt and save you much inconvenience, because you will not have to stand in line at a bank to make your first payment.

7. Subscribe early. It helps the Government, it helps you and it helps the Community.

POOR THING

GRAY TULLE EVENING GOWN

This beautiful gown is built of gray tulle over silver cloth with floral decoration of chiffon and ribbon in rose shades.

NEW JET AND STEEL BUCKLES

Decorations for the Different Colors of Footwear Worn in Afternoon and Evening.

Ornamental buckles are in rogue for afternoon and evening shoes and slippers, and the shops are showing a most tempting assortment of them.

One of the most unusual—although by no means freakish—of the evening slipper buckles is the beaded one. That does not mean that an elaborate design is worked out in colored beads. It means that a buckle is formed of row after row of small beads fastened snugly on a stiffened form.

Jet and steel bead buckles are worn on black slippers and on bronze and brown slippers buckles of tiny brown beads are worn.

Sometimes, too, a design is worked into these bead buckles, but it is only a two-tone design—black and steel, bronze and brown beads, or some such unobtrusive combination as that gives the best results.

For the gray suede shoes—and a good many are in evidence for afternoon wear—there are buckles of steel beads mounted on a gray suede foundation, with a patch of gray suede showing inside the band of shining steel beads.

There are some attractive new bead slippers, with straps across the instep. These come in both black and bronze, beaded in steel and brown or bronze beads. They also come in gray suede, with steel beads.

There are also buckles for afternoon shoes of natural leather made of black enamel and steel beads, and some of black enamel and rhinestones for evening slippers.

NEW SPRING HAT FASHIONS

A tufted hat of dark blue taffeta, with a steel bead fastened in each tuft, is not only charming in itself, but capable of several deviations from the original that would be quite worth while.

Brims that turn abruptly back from the face are characteristic of a good many of the spring hats. Trimming is often placed on this back-turned brim in a very effective manner.

Many of the new hats show a band of trimming at the edge of the crown. This is sometimes a row of artificial flowers, fastened with very short stems straight around. Sometimes there is an inset band of silk on the straw, with embroidery in colored cotton thread. Sometimes the trimming consists in tiny ostrich points, upstanding in a band half an inch from the edge of the hat brim.

NAME 1919 VICTORY COLORS

Rich, Deep Blue and a Bright Cherry Are Chosen—Provide Excellent Contrast.

Those in America who choose the seasonal colors for the dyers and dressmakers have united upon a rich, deep blue and a bright cherry as the victory colors for 1919. It is not the red that we associate with conquerors; it is too light and thin in its texture, but it will undoubtedly prove a success, as it is an excellent contrast to the victory blue.

The choice of these colors is confined to America. We do not know that France will launch victory colors, but it is to be supposed that if she does, whereas a correspondent she will use the horizon blue of the French uniform or the blue of the French flag. She is not much given to this kind of work. It may be that she will not celebrate victory through fabrics.

Art for Art's Sake.

"The dedication of things artistic," mused the gay youth, "to temperament would be a wedding between the girl on the front page of a current magazine and the fellow on the cover ad vertisement."

PIONEERS MAY BE HOME SOON

Cornwell, In Letter From Guis, Tells of Rumor of Start This Month—Doughboys May Not Speak To Germans on Street.

Guis, Germany.
April 9, 1919.

Dear Willie:—

Having nothing else to do at the present time, thought I would drop you a few lines. I haven't heard from you in a couple of weeks. Hope you are well as I am feeling good.

The weather for the past few days has been fine. I guess summer will soon be here. Overcoats are not needed as it is too warm with one on. The Moselle and Rhine valleys will be very pretty in about a month, and while I would like to see them when everything is green, and I guess I will, I would rather see the Hudson valley.

I am enclosing a post card on which is the insignia which we wear on our left arm. You will also see on the card a view of the house in which I live. I have marked it number "8" as that is the house number. The name of the street is Zehnhofstrasse. Quite a name. We have been here in Guis over three months.

There is a rumor around that we will sail for home about the middle of next month, but I suppose that is the same as the other ones; they never come true. But, some day when they haven't any further use for us, they will start us on our way and what a happy crowd we will be.

At present I am working at our Battalion Headquarters, doing typewriting. Some days we have lots to do and some days it is rather dull. We have been quite busy the past few days. Last night I worked until about 12:30. When I went home I found that I had been locked out. There I was on the street about one o'clock this morning wondering how I was going to get in as I wanted to get a little sleep. At last I thought if I had a long stick I might be able to get the gate open, so I went down where our kitchen is and got a stick I thought would do and went back to see if it would work. The door was braced on the inside with a heavy pole as well as fastened at the bottom. After working awhile I finally knocked the pole down and then the rest of my work was easy.

Did you ever receive the pictures I sent to you? We haven't had any mail for about ten days but expect some any day now.

Well, how's everything back home? Suppose things are beginning to take on the appearance of summer.

I suppose there was quite a time for the boys of the 27th Division in Kingston.

I read in the paper where they were trying to get volunteers to come over here and relieve the Army of Occupation. Now, all those who objected to our wearing a gold stripe or stripes on our arm should take advantage of that offer and come over and get one or more. Of course, they might not like it at first, but they would get used to the ways and customs after a few weeks. And another thing, peace will probably be all fixed by that time and they would probably let them talk to the German people on the street, whereas now it is forbidden for us to talk to them on the street. I wonder how many of those who hollered will take advantage of the offer?

Well, I think it is about time I ring off. Regards to all the boys. Best wishes.

Lovingly,
GENE.

Famous Serbian City.

The Serbian city of Nish has always possessed strategic significance. It is the ancient Naissus, the birthplace of Constantine, which commanded an important Roman military road and where Claudius II won his great victory over the Ostra-Goths. Oddly enough, the ancient city was destroyed by Attila's Huns, from whom, according to one of the best authorities on the ethnology of the Balkan races, the modern Bulgarians are descended. In recent times Nish has become the Porkopolis of Serbia, and before the Bulgarian occupation was infested with pigs, the ubiquitous national animals cherished by all Serbian peasants. The Serbian pig is a lean, bristly, semiwild ruffian, who urgently needs "reconstruction" by the introduction of Berkshire and Yorkshire breeds.

CAPT. HENDRICKS WITHOUT FEAR

Ulster Academy Man and Civil Engineer Praised by Superior—Has Been Long in Hospital.

Captain Ernest D. Hendricks, who was in the 303rd Engineer Regiment, writes his father, D. B. Hendricks of Elmendorf street, that he arrived in the United States, that he arrived in S. S. Antigone and is now in Hospital Camp Stuart, Newport News, Va. He was in a hospital in France and evidently saw some fighting as will be seen in reading the letter of Major Judge to a friend in Amsterdam, N. Y. Captain Hendricks is a graduate of Ulster Academy, later studying at Cornell and was for some time an engineer in charge of barge canal work.

Major Judge's letter follows:

Your letter came shortly after our arrival in France and though I had the best intentions in the world regarding a prompt answer to it, so many things were happening, the opportunity failed to present itself.

The things you would like to know the censor forbids us writing and confines ones letter almost to the weather. However, I hope to see you some time and tell you all about it.

Of course you heard about Lieutenant Doolittle. I couldn't write any details about it while in the line and not yet, for that matter. He was killed in action and died like a real man can die. We were 48 hours recovering his body. I verified it being his and the funeral services were conducted by our chaplain. I found a concrete cross, that the Germans had a store of, for marking their graves, and had an inscription cut on it and placed at the head of his grave. His death took the heart out of me for awhile but you can't dwell on the loss of your best friend very long and fight the Boche. The best bet was to get even and collect a little interest, which I think we did, for "Dooly's old company was especially commended for their work in the last drive and subsequent break and flight of the Boche.

And speaking of that old company of his—Ernest Hendricks, you know, is captain of it, and I want to say without handing him any bouquets that Fort Plainers can well afford to be proud of him and take their hats off to him when he comes home. I have begun to believe he is absolutely fearless and have seen him, from a safe distance, as well as been with him under shell-fire and have began to admire him more than I thought possible. He is like an iceberg for coolness, and the rapid advance of our division was due primarily to the work of his company with him there on the job at every moment. Of course the other companies of the regiment were doing their share, but his was in the lead and made the reconnoissance. He was practically under shell fire for 10 days, straight. Some boy! I can't say too much for him. He intended writing about "Dooly" also but was kept from it for the same reason as myself.

I just heard from Mrs. Judge and her phoning you in regard to my being wounded. I don't know why this man Bogardus wrote sch a thing, for I haven't so far, received a scratch. About a week before "Dooly's" death I had my horse killed by a shell, just as I dismounted, and still had the reins in my hands. It was some seconds before I knew whether I was hurt or not, I was covered with blood and the shock of the shell was so great. He may have heard I was o. k. he saw me, thought I was hurt; I am glad to say I wasn't. Everybody is welcome to wound stripe that deserves it; I don't want any.

We came out of the line some days ago and are enroute to a rest area. The war seems over, but the Boche is a crooked individual, so we will see what happens in the next 30 days—during the armistice. Anyway, we all hope it is over and that our return to the states will be soon, though we don't look for it.

This will reach you about Christmas time so I will wish yourself and family a Merry Christmas and Happy New Year.

EVERY day young men are coming in to change their uniform of war for a uniform of peace. They tell us that the

we are showing for Spring have the "dog" and dash they want.

With the passing of all restrictions on design also went all the old ideas. These makers of quality clothes thought it was time to start something new and the Spring styles show it. That is why they're so popular with young men, both those who served with the colors and those who served at home. New styles, but the same old standards of quality and value giving.

Counteracting Foul Air.

At times it is quite necessary to be in a place where quarters are close and the air anything but fresh. In crowded cars, for example, in subways, elevators, busses and other means of conveyance, as well as in halls and theaters, the waste material present in the air almost always exceeds the amount of oxygen present. It is largely due to this condition of the air that ailments are contracted to such a great extent in these places. Take breaths as deep as you possibly can when you get on a car and when you get off it. In either instance you load your tiny blood tubes and vessels with plenty of oxygen, so that you prepare a way strongly to resist the poisonous influence of the air you must breathe during the next few moments or for the next hour or so.

Not as Interesting.

To know thyself is better than trying to find out all about the neighbors.—Toledo Blade.

Keep Up the Morale.

Colonel Frank Billings, chief of the division of physical reconstruction of the office of the Surgeon General, is quoted as saying recently at a meeting at Carnegie Hall:

"It behooves us now to keep up the morale of the wounded soldiers. I appeal for the support of all men and women for this work. Don't be guilty of forgetting."

EMMA SAYS SHE IS NOT MARRIED

And Visits The Freeman Office to Deny Announcement of Her Wedding to Private Lewis A. Countryman—What City Records Show.

It was the noon hour today when a vision in black without a hat tripped into the editorial sanctum, and stated that she wanted it announced in the newspaper that she was not married to Lewis A. Countryman, and that the first she knew of the marriage was when she read it in The Freeman the latter part of April.

"My name is Miss Emma Banks" she informed the man on the desk, "And I had been out of town for a while and when I came home my sister-in-law said to me that it was a nice thing I had done, and that I was slick in going out of town to get married."

"Miss Banks" continued her story, saying that she informed her relative that she was not married and then the sister-in-law brought out The Freeman and showed her the item regarding the marriage. She also stated that the marriage item gave her address as 85 Mary's avenue, which was her father's home, but she had not resided there in four years.

What City Records Show.

As the marriage of Mr. Countryman and Miss Banks had been looked up at the time by a reporter, the man on the desk naturally wondered how such an error had crept into the news columns—as errors are bound to do even with the utmost care.

When the reporter returned from lunch he was asked about the item and what there was to it. "Why, it's O.K., they were married," he replied, surprised, and hastening to the telephone he called up City Clerk Doremus and asked him to look up his records of marriages.

The city clerk obligingly did so and his records showed that Lewis A. Countryman of No. 178 Third avenue and Miss Emma Banks of No. 85 Mary's avenue had called together at the city hall and secured a marriage certificate.

And They Were Married.

He further stated that the minister who performed the ceremony had returned the certificate duly filled out and signed by himself and the witnesses. The marriage was performed on April 27 by the Rev. Forrest R. Edwards at Modena and the witnesses were Helen R. Terwilliger and Earl Terwilliger.

Are There Two Emmas?

This naturally raised the question of whether there were two Emma Banks in Kingston. If there was only one, and she was the one who had interviewed the city editor, she must have been an accomplished liar.

Hubby Misses Wife.

In order to clear up the situation the reporter in spite of the warm weather decided to use "Shank's Mare" and visit the bride and groom and see which Emma Banks had been married.

Mr. Countryman, who has recently been honorably discharged from the army, was found at home. He resides at No. 178 Third avenue, the address he gave when he secured his marriage license.

Private Countryman still wore the uniform of his country, and in reply to questions said that he had married Miss Emma Banks of 85 Mary's avenue and could prove it by the minister and the two witnesses.

"Where is Mrs. Countryman?" he was asked.

"Gone," he replied laconically.

Wifey Left Wednesday.

He said that Tuesday of last week they had returned from their honeymoon.

Wednesday morning wifie informed him she had to do some shopping. She kissed him goodbye and said she would return in two hours.

Her two hours have proven extremely lengthy for she has not returned yet.

And More to Follow.

Private Countryman advanced no reason for his wife's unexplained absence from the family roof tree, but further complications are expected to follow.

They will be duly chronicled.

SUPREME COURT CONVENES TODAY

Supreme court, Justice Howard presiding, convened at the court house this afternoon. There is a grand jury in attendance and there is one case to investigate, being that of The People against Patrick Rock, in jail, being held on a charge of larceny committed in this city, for taking money from a young man.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, May 5—The most important feature of the trading on the stock market exchange in the early dealings to-day was the heavy trading all around the room within a comparatively narrow range of fluctuation. The tone was strong, considering that the market was called upon to stand a large volume of realizing sales. Steel common ranged from 99 to 98⅝ and the other steel industrials acted in the same manner. Westinghouse, after opening ¼ higher at 57 yielded 55¼. American Can moved up one point to another new high record of 56⅛ and Atlantic Gulf rose two points to 156½. Lorillard was in supply, falling over 7 points to 170½.

Price movements were irregular during the forenoon, reflecting a continued increase in profit taking sales, which was offset in many issues by renewed pool activities with banking buying a factor in some issues. Canadian Pacific was active and strong, advancing four points to 169, but the other railroad issues, including the low priced stocks were in supply at concessions. Texas Company was the most active of the oil issues, moving up 7 points to 235. The traction stocks were also strong, Interborough preferred moving up 1½ to 14⅞, while Con. Gas rose 2 points to 100. Steel common, after selling down to 98¼, again rallied to 98¾.

The market closed firm; government bonds unchanged; railway and other bonds steady.

VICTORY SPECIAL AT ACCORD SOON

The much heralded and eagerly awaited Victory Special which toured the state last year in the interests of victory is now finishing the job in the interest of thrift. It will arrive in Accord on Thursday, May 8th and will stand at the O. & W. station. Miss Lucile Brewer and other specialists of the department of home economics of the New York State College of Agriculture at Cornell University will be on the car all the time it is here to answer questions pertaining to thrifty homemaking and to explain the various exhibits on board the train. At 2 o'clock a demonstration lecture will be given on the uses of different foods and new methods of their preparation and preservation.

The unusual opportunity to have two specialists from Cornell University come to this town with a special train of equipment and exhibits will probably be grasped by every woman in the town of Rochester, who is interested in the thrifty management of a home in these abnormal times. There is no charge for information, exhibits and demonstrations. The exhibits include homecial made and commercial labor saving devices, homemade clothing, showing the possibilities of remodeling and renovating old clothes, attractive forms of home preserved foods, plans for convenient houses and good furnishings, and many other things of interest to the homemaker.

Remember the hour and the place and watch for the train with the sign and flag at the railroad station.

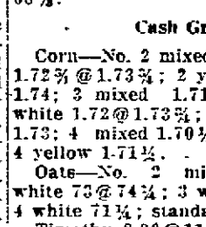
VICTORY LOAN BUTTON.

The button issued to subscribers to the Victory Liberty Loan is simple in design. On a plain dark blue background is a big white "V," signifying both Victory and the Fifth Liberty Loan. Above the "V," following the curve of the button's rim, is the word "Liberty." Below the "V" also following the curve, is the word "Loan."



The button is the same size as that used for the Fourth Liberty Loan.

Millions of these buttons have been prepared and distributed to various loan organizations ready for issuance to banks, trusts and canvassing agents.

Each subscriber is entitled to a button as a token of his enlistment in the great army of Note holders.

Of this button, Carter Glass has said: "Every American should consider it an honor to wear this button."

VICTORY RHYMES.

"I'd rather have somewhat less fun,
I'd rather buy more than have done.
And so for the Loan
I'll stand by and yet more,
And I'll buy and I'll buy till it's done."

HOW PURITANS REGULATED CONDUCT IN THEIR COMMUNITIES.—Like King James, the Puritans disapproved of smoking, and though men might indulge within doors or in the fields, they were repeatedly fined "for drinking tobacco in the highwey." Roland G. Usher says in his "The Pilgrims and Their History." Church attendance was compulsory, but this was no great hardship in a time when no Sunday work was allowed; "one wight was fined for writing a letter on Sunday, "at least in the evening somewhat too soon." Christmas was not wholly under the ban. The first year the whole colony spent Christmas at hard labor. The second year some newcomers on the Fortune refused to go to the fields, saying that it "wente against their conscience to work on that day," and bein tender of conscience, the leaders excused them. When they returned to Plymouth village for lunch, they found these conscientious objectors to Christmas labor playing stool-ball and other good English games in the street, and this public "gaming and reveling" was promptly stopped. The regulation of young people's conduct was very strict. In 1638 a law was passed that no man should propose to a girl without the consent of her parents or (if she were a servant) her master. The gallants of Plymouth were wroth, and it became necessary to inflict numerous punishments for "irregular" proposals and acceptances.

THEIR FIRST IDEAS OF LIFE

Why It Is Matter of Importance to Provide Appropriate Toys for the Children.

That pep and all the other characteristics which temper the American are bound up inextricably in the toys we provide for our children is the reasoned belief advanced by Sarah Comstock in Good Housekeeping. To quote:

"Look over the drama of life that your small son and daughter are reproducing there on the nursery floor. What is the basis of the girl's idea of the real world? It is playing house. Isn't that a profound and a beautiful fact? Already she is carrying out those instincts that are as old as the race. She mothers her dolls, rocks them to sleep, trundles them in a carriage. She furnishes their house and keeps it in housewifely order with little broom or carpet sweeper. She launders their garments with tub, washboard and tiny iron; she cooks (in imagination) their meals upon a stove and sets them forth in dainty dishes.

"Trains of cars, motors, boats, Noah's arks, reins, fire engines, all offer the boy the opportunity to act out the primitive masculine life that appeals so strongly to his youth, the life of simple, manly prowess. He would far rather be a brave soldier, fireman, engineer or sailor than a lawyer, professor, painter or poet. He revels in those sturdy playthings that he can arrange and rearrange, draw, propel, sail—in fine, can direct and operate with his own lively young energies."

Why Red Cross Is Loved.

Guatemala's catastrophe in ordinary times would fill a large space in the newspapers. Now it falls in among the many stories of disaster and suffering that have marched in long procession through the columns of the press for the last three years.

But it is good to know that there exists an organization which is never deaf to the cry of humanity for help; an organization whose responsiveness grows with need, and that, burdened as never before in its history, is able to meet each new demand with prompt ministration.

Already a shipload of supplies is leaving New Orleans, bearing the flag of the American Red Cross. Thank God for the Red Cross, keeping alive our highest ideals of merciful service and making the small bounties of millions of individuals a mighty force for the relief of anguish.—Terre Haute Star.

How to Fight Pneumonia.

The experiments of the army medical corps with vaccination against pneumonia in two of the army camps have had so much apparent success that a memorandum has been issued to officers, enlisted men and employees of the war department announcing that this vaccination is available to all who desire it. At Camp Upton during a period of ten weeks pneumonia was only one-tenth as high among vaccinated as among the unvaccinated, although previous to vaccination the pneumonia had occurred equally in the two groups. The vaccination is not intended to cure those who are ill with pneumonia, and it is not advised for persons who are suffering from acute colds or fever.

How to Color Photographs.

To further color photography a New York man has invented a camera in which two plates are exposed at once, a perforated mirror that permits light to reach one plate reflecting it also to the other.

Whiskers Are Forbidden.

Italian soldiers are not permitted to wear whiskers. The war department issued "recommendations" to the effect that officers and men would be wise to be clean shaven.

Be Slow to Condemn.

Why condemn an individual or institution before you hear both sides? Does it not remind us of a judge sentencing a prisoner before the evidence is heard?

MR. AND MRS. COWBIRD.

"What did you do with the eggs?" asked Mr. Cowbird.

"Left them in a sparrow's nest," said Mrs. Cowbird.

"Dear me, that is a joke," said Mr. Cowbird. "You left everything for Mrs. Sparrow to do. You are a fine one to make others work for you."

"My dear Mr. Cowbird," said Mrs. Cowbird, "I consider it extremely clever for any bird or any creature to get others to work for them and to be lazy themselves."

"Well," said Mr. Cowbird, "it is a certain sort of cleverness, but not one which we all admire. I admire it of course, for I am a cowbird, and I think you're smart. You suit me as a mate, anyway."

"And you suit me," said Mrs. Cowbird. "I think your shiny blackish green coat, and your brown hat make you look so handsome."

"I like your gray dress," said Mr. Cowbird. "It is becoming and it is a modest costume for a Mrs. Cowbird."

"The children will dress like me until they are older," said Mrs. Cowbird. "Then it will depend on whether they are Miss Cowbirds or Master Cowbirds. If they are Miss Cowbirds they will take after their mother, and if they are Master Cowbirds they will take after their father."

"That is a good way, isn't it?"

"A fine way," said Mr. Cowbird.

"Of course I won't be there to look after them, but I know they will do that way, for cowbird children always have, and some of the eggs have been left at times with warblers. Some mother cowbirds have left their eggs with vireos and the vireos have brought them up," said Mrs. Cowbird.

"Yes," she continued, "we are the only birds I have ever seen or heard of who do as we do."

"What do you mean?" asked Mr. Cowbird. "Do you mean because we walk through the pastures where the cows are in the summer and because we do not feel afraid of cows, we are different?"

"No," said Mrs. Cowbird, "that isn't what I mean, but that is how we have our family name, of course. That is the reason for that."

"Tell me what you were going to say before," said Mr. Cowbird.

"We are the only birds I've ever heard of, or seen," said Mr. Cowbird, "who do not either make a nest of their own or bring up their young.

"We don't bother about building a nest."

"It would be silly to do so," said Mr. Cowbird, "without first seeing whose nest we can leave the eggs in. We can always find one. We're sly that way, or rather you are. I have seen you."

"Yes, I am sly," said Mrs. Cowbird. "I leave my eggs in a nest when the one who owns the nest is taking a little fly, or has gone a-marketing.

"But think, Mr. Cowbird, we're the only birds who don't care to bring up our young. We let others do that."

"We believe in nurses rather than mothers, eh?" asked Mr. Cowbird. "We don't believe in looking after our eggs and little ones ourselves."

"We don't want to take the time or trouble. We're very lazy. It's lazy not to build a nest, it's lazy not to look after the young.

"But the young will do the same with their young because they never had their mothers to look after them, and so won't see any reason for it themselves.

"We don't behave like other mother birds, we mother cowbirds, for we're without the great mother love that they have for their young."

"Mother love is silly," said Mr. Cowbird. "Silly to work hard for the young and think it's all mother love and great joy."

"Silly," chirped Mrs. Cowbird, "and I'm glad you agree with me."

"Of course I do," said Mr. Cowbird, as he spread his tail and his wings.

But all the other birds in birdland said:

"Oh, we're glad we aren't the cowbirds, for they miss all the great joys of life. They don't know what it is to own their home. And the mother cowbirds don't know what it is to look after their very own little birdlings."

Two Friends.

"In-a-minute" is a bad friend. He makes you put off what you ought to do at once, and so he gets you into a great deal of trouble.

"Right-away" is a good friend. He helps you to do pleasantly and quickly what you are asked to do, and he never gets you into trouble.—Selected.

Life's Turning Point.

When you get into a tight place, and everything goes against you, till it seems as if you couldn't hold on a minute longer, never give up then, for that is just the place and time the tide will turn. — Harriet Beecher Stowe.

Hands Up!

By RALPH BEACH WALL

(Copyright.)

There was wild, unsubdued fire in her eyes. By the way she threw back her head and shouted to her mount, a sleek cayuse, one could tell at a glance that she was a girl of spirit, who did things.

Bess was not accustomed to riding alone through the gorge trail, covered only by a stage from Silverhead, a neighboring mining town. Usually Phil rode with her.

It was half in anger toward him that she had chosen the lonesome, some said dangerous, route.

She had seen Phil two hours before, and, as usual, had shouted an invitation for him to ride with her.

"Can't! I'm busy today. See you later," he answered, waving his hat to her and galloping on.

There was something in his eyes that bothered the girl, when she remembered it. It was for that reason, half an hour later, Bess had chosen the lonely gorge road.

She wanted to be alone, to think about Phil, and weigh her father's doubts about the young fellow, who seemed to do nothing save idle his time away, and who had never been caught working since he had struck town two months before.

Why did he occasionally go off on his horse alone, and not come back till the next day? Who were the city men he often met at the daily train, and sometimes went on with for a day or two?

He had never explained his business to Bess.

The night before he had asked her to marry him. The thought had come to her so suddenly that all she could do was ask for time.

"I will answer you tomorrow evening," she had said.

She could not understand his urgency, the eagerness in his voice.

"But I have many things to think of," she protested. "You know how father is opposed to you. It's partly because you look city-bred, and still know horses and mining so well. He seems to be almost suspicious of you."

"I can easily clear up any suspicion," he had answered confidently. "But I want my answer now. Tomorrow may be too late."

Why had he repeated that ominous warning? Had he planned anything for today? Was he in danger of any kind?

At that moment the rumble of wheels behind her caused Bess to turn. She had already reached a lonely spot in the gorge, some miles from town.

It was the stage from Silverhead, carrying its cargo of silver and passengers, winding through the gully, cut sharply between high cliffs. The four horses were straining at their load, and coming along at a smart clip.

Bess whipped up her horse to gain a wider part of the road, where the coach could pass her.

The passage was uneven and full of rocks. Riding being difficult, the girl bent all her attention on the steed.

At a sharp turn in the road something scared the skittish cayuse. A second later the animal shied at a big bowlder confronting them, and Bess was hurled through the air, over his head, landing in a jut in the wall.

Her revolver flew from her belt with the jolt, and the frightened cayuse galloped on alone.

When the girl pulled herself together she found that the horse had thrown her into an opening, a little pocket in the natural stone wall at the turning which commanded a view of the road on both sides of the sharp corner.

She glanced out, and found the stage drawing near at a rapid rate; then, looking in the opposite direction, Bess saw her cayuse galloping madly, already half a mile away.

The revolver that had jolted loose was the next thing to attract her attention, and she was about to slide down and recover it from the ledge, two feet below, when a quick movement attracted her in the direction her horse had taken.

The girl's eyes dilated and she seemed frozen to the spot, as she watched three masked horsemen nearing the gully road through a narrow defile down one side.

In a moment Bess realized. The stage was thundering on.

She slipped forward to get the gun. The stage was not a hundred yards off.

Bess glanced apprehensively at the three grim horsemen, partly concealed behind a bowlder at the roadside.

The hand reaching for the revolver drew back sharply. She caught in her breath with a convulsive gasp.

Bess had recognized in that instant the leader of the bandits.

It was Phil.

Around his neck was the very handkerchief she had spent weeks embroidering for him, every stitch an expression of love and faith.

Then her eyes glinted like blue steel. Her teeth snapped together, and she made a quick grasp for the revolver.

With it secure in her hand, she hesitated but a moment; then, her cheeks white and lips drawn, she steadily aimed the revolver at her unsuspecting lover, who, with his men, awaited the stage.

There was the love of a savage and the hate of a savage in her expression. She had found out her lover at last, and had instinctively pointed the gun at him.

Bess' left hand clenched so that the tendons showed white through the skin, and the forefinger of her right hand twitched on the trigger.

Before she realized the trembling finger gave a jerk and pulled the trigger. There came a slight click, but nothing more.

The hammer had become jammed by the jolting received when it fell from her belt.

Glancing up, her wits scattered by this sudden discovery, she saw the stage rolling past the gap.

It was too late. The gun had failed, and the stage had passed before she could give the warning.

"Hands up!"

The gruff growl made Bess grow faint, and her eyes swam. For in it she recognized the same tone that she knew so well in Phil's voice, but it was so brutal, so different.

She watched, with a stifling throat and heaving bosom, as a shot rang out from Phil's gun and the driver, who had not obeyed the summons quickly enough, tumbled from his seat and flopped onto his back in the road.

Bess sprang to her feet, aflare with madness. Her wits worked rapidly; she must do something to cope with his brutality.

The bandits stopped the dashing horses, and in a moment a trembling party of travelers filed slowly from the stage.

They lined up in a row, their hands high above their heads.

Bess gave a strangled gasp, a sudden impulse seized her, and she leaped to the road, her revolver clubbed and clutched tensely.

With blind fury she flew to the hold-up scene, her nostrils dilated, her eyes red-rimmed.

The leader evidently saw her coming. He darted forward, and a minute later Bess found herself struggling and fighting in his strong arms. He knocked the revolver from her hand and tried to explain something in eager words.

But she would not listen. She screamed with rage and tore at him; his very touch was the blight. His hands seated her wherever they rested.

In the meantime his companions continued their work and paid no attention to him.

With a wild gleam in his eyes, Phil suddenly forced her back and held her tightly explaining to her, trying to get the girl to listen to his defense.

Through sheer weakness Bess finally had to listen. Then the words had their effect. Her eyes gleamed, she looked at him squarely and became more quiet.

"Wait here!" he cried suddenly. "I'll go back and get the stuff. Wait here for me."

As he dashed off Bess sank to the ground, utterly spent, and she lay sobbing weakly, while her lover rushed back to the frightened group of travelers, swooped up the valuables, tied them in a wide handkerchief, mounted his horse, fired several shots in the air, and swung down the trail to where Bess sat in a heap, wondering trying to reassure herself that all he had said was true.

Half a mile from the holdup scene he drew rein abruptly and turned to Bess with a reassuring smile.

"I had to go this far," he explained. "They need a slide in the picture of the bandits getting away, and I guess mine was some picturesque getaway.

"Your butting in helped the picture a good deal, Bess. They'll change the idea and label this part: 'Wife Pleading With Bandit Chief.'"

"Phil," she said, looking up with yearning eyes, in which the slightest suggestion of a smile was beginning to glow, "is it really true? I know it must be. But the thing seemed so real at the time. I never saw a moving picture taken before."

"Well, it won't be the last one you'll see taken, I hope," the man smiled, wiping her tear-stained face with the handkerchief she had made for him.

"That's my business. The people in the stage-coach and my confederates are all actors; the man who did the stage-fall from the driver's seat is my brother. We're in partnership in the business."

"But why didn't you explain all this before?" queried the girl, the smile succeeding in erasing some of the tragic tensity of her features.

"Well, people are curious about moving pictures; they want to butt in and see them taken. That spoils the whole thing, and I didn't want to be bothered."

"Haven't I bothered you, Phil, just a little?" she asked, the smile asserting itself boldly for the first time.

"You've bothered me more than anything has for a long time," he cried, reaching toward her eagerly.

"Well," she said, having recovered her natural spirit entirely, "I guess I'll fix it up with you and a justice of the peace, so I can have the exclusive privilege of bothering you all the rest of your life."

"So you're made up your mind at last," he cried, inclosing her in a tender embrace.

She threw off his arms playfully and spurred the horse into action; they galloped back to the moving-picture party and announced their engagement.

Then Bess told of how she had almost tried to kill the bandit chief, assuring them, however, that even if the hammer hadn't been jammed, she couldn't have hit him with such a trembly hand.

Versailles.

Versailles, France, a city of about 60,000 population, the capital of the department of Seine-et-Oise, stands on a plain 11 miles southwest of Paris by rail. A city more of pleasure than of industry, long accustomed to find its sustenance in the expenditure of a luxurious court, and subsequently a place of residence for many foreigners, attracted hither by the salubrity of the climate, it has few manufactures and little trade. The town covers a large area in proportion to its population, and is of remarkably regular construction, consisting of long and straight streets, crossing at right angles.

Mercuric Intensification.

A stock solution of mercuric chloride is a convenient material for mercurial intensification: the negative being immersed in this until bleached right through, then well washed and darkened with dilute ammonia. Instead of the stock solution consisting of the chloride by itself, it has been pointed out by Vogel and others that it is an advantage to dissolve the mercuric chloride in a five per cent solution of common salt, to each ounce of which ten drops of strong hydrochloric acid have been added. A convenient strength for the chloride is one of ten grains to the ounce of liquid. If the solution is too strong it will cause reticulation of the negative.

Netherlands' History.

Under the rule of Charles the Bold the power of the dukes of Burgundy reached its height and then began the collapse. Flanders passed under the dominion of the house of Hapsburg a little later under Spanish rule and then with the Spanish Netherlands under Austrian rule. Then it was that Rubens was appointed court painter by Albert and went to live in Antwerp. At this time Rubens was only thirty-five and still under the influence of Italian art. One of the first works painted by him after his arrival in Flanders was the descent from the Cross, the central panel of the great triptych of St. Christopher, in the cathedral at Antwerp.

Rice in Japan.

Rice was the food of the gods and still is the food of the gods. At the family shrines dedicated to departed relatives the Japanese presents offerings consisting of rice. Every fall on the same morning, while last year's harvest is being gathered, the emperor personally observes the custom only on exceptional days. Japanese wine is made of rice and Japanese cakes largely of the same grain, and the ceremonies connected with it are such that they would never think of using any other. Besides they missed so much last year's crop through the failure of the rains that they are saving every grain they can.

"There's Security For Victory Notes"

THE VICTORY LOAN AND INTEREST.

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

The interest that goes with the bonds of the Victory Loan is both material and spiritual. It is the latter interest that should induce every American to buy Victory Notes, and buy without stint.

THE VICTORY NOTES ARE SOUVENIRS OF THE FALL OF THE HOHENZOLLERN HOUSE OF BONDAGE.

This is their spiritual interest—and how richly does it repay the investor!

The boys are coming back. May God bless the boys! They WENT and they WON! Flung against Prussia's pick, at a time when their defeat might have meant the crumpling up of all the Allies, they did what Americans at home expected them to do and what foreign military experts did NOT expect them to do—they went through the German veterans like fire through a dry forest. The Old World stood dumb before the New—and then collapsed.

The boys are not all coming back. Some of them are with the dreamless slumberers where France's flowers wave in this triumphant Spring. Some of them had their last great day a little while ago. Resting now, they have bequeathed to us brave memories of a brave Crusade in which God planned for them to be the Fallen Knights. The grass is green today above their beloved graves, and birds of Spring are warbling threnodies over May who died for Men.

The problems of existence are for them no more. The heartaches and the joys of humanity, the ebb and flow of patient toilers on the busy thoroughfares, the laughter of children and the pealing of bells—all these things are of a world they died to save, and have no place in that quiet world where heroes wait and rest within the heart of Mother Earth.

O Consecrated Dead! It is for you that we who live dedicate our bodies and our spirits to a dearer, deathless America! It is for you that we vow to make this VICTORY LOAN a shining success.

Not Much of a Pusher.

It was the elevated station at 8 a. m. on a weekday morning. The advice of the Irish guard who holds close the gates of the rear cars was an education in itself. But he had a competitor in a girl who was doing her valiant best to get on. "Push, push," she urged of a weak little masculine bowler. In a wish-I-wasn't voice he replied that he was pushing. Back came the swift retort: "Yes, you're too tired! You push like a jellyfish."—New York Sun.

Opium.

Opium is the dried juice of the unripe capsules of a flower that grows in the fields of Asia. A few days after the flowers have fallen off the plants are cut through the fields in the afternoon and make little cuts in the poppy heads. Out of these runs a milky juice called opium, which dries into a brown, sticky paste. Every morning the men go through the fields again and scrape off this paste which they put into jars. Later on it is made into half-pound balls and then packed for shipment.

America's Largest Industry.

The United States' largest manufacturing industry is farming and stock raising, for more persons are engaged in agriculture than are employed in any other line. The agricultural output of about 14 per cent is placed at $9,000,000,000 in the annual report of the yearly increase in these years of scarcity and high prices. In the year ending in June, 1918, 21,000,000 persons were engaged in agriculture, and the per capita production was $429.

Why Muskie Go Blind.

Many dogs that are driven in dog sled teams become blind. Fanciers of the animals have found that this is caused by the bitch of the dog that is running ahead and sending the scent back to him and to some extent paralyzing the optic nerves of the dogs behind her. The same loss of sight occurs in the case of dogs that are used in the Alaskan gold fields.

An Eleventh Hour Patriot

By EDWARD P. BEACH.

When Bingville's one militia troop marched gayly off to war the whole blamed town was proud o' them and cheered itself nigh sore. Most every one as seen them boys go marchin' off that day had kin among the boys who went to take part in the fray, and we knowed right well that every one was sure to do his share at beatin' back the German hordes what ran wild over there. All 'cept me an' old Jeb Newton had a boy or two to go, so we jes couldn't figger how we could strike a blow. But when our boys started fightin' (home folks was asked to buy them Stamps and Notes from Uncle Sam) came a chance for Jeb and I. But Jeb was set ag'in the thing and wouldn't lend a son; said he worked for all he had and meant to keep it too. Today we heard that Bingville's boys would be returnin' soon, with here and there an empty sleeve (some sleep where poppies bloom), and so old Jeb jes came to me and said he couldn't face a single mother's son o' them while he felt in disgrace, so he's started in to buyin' every stamp and Note he can and says he'll be as true as Bingville's boys to Uncle Sam.

Second French Revolution.

The French revolution of 1848 is sometimes called the second revolution, the first having been that of 1789, resulting in the establishment of a republic, which was followed by the empire under Napoleon I, and this in turn by the restoration of the Bourbon dynasty. The revolution of 1848 resulted in the abdication and banishment of King Louis Philippe, the proclamation of a republic, the election of Louis Napoleon as president, and later the establishment of the empire, with him as emperor under the title of Napoleon III. This revolution was not accompanied by extensive military operations, but there was heavy fighting in Paris, in which several thousand persons were killed.

Cannot Do Without Sleep.

Sleep is a necessity of life no less than is food. No man has ever succeeded in keeping awake for more than a few days continuously. If he is forced to do so, as in ancient Chinese tortures, where constant tickling of the feet made sleep impossible, he falls at last into a comatose state from which he never awakes.

To Make Attar of Roses.

After having gathered a quantity of roses, place them in a jar, then pour upon them some spring water. Cover the top with thin muslin to keep out the dust, and expose the jar to the heat of the sun for a few days, until oily particles are observed to be floating on the surface of the water. Take off this oil substance and place it in a bottle. This is the perfume known as "attar of roses."

Size of the Foot.

The foot should be as long as the ulna, or chief bone of the forearm—that is, from the small head of the bone to between at the wrist to the joint of the elbow should be the length of the foot.

WE ARE THE MAIMED.

In Flanders fields we do not lie
Where poppies grow and larks will fly,
Forever singing as they go.
Above the bodies, row on row,
Of those whose duty was to die.

We are the maimed! Death did deny
Its solace. Crippled, blind, we try
To find on earth the peace they know
In Flanders fields.

Forget us not! As years go by,
On your remembrance we rely
For love that sees the hearts below
Our broken bodies. Else we grow
To crave our peace with those who lie
In Flanders fields.

DAIRYMEN'S NEWS FROM NEW YORK

70,000 Consumers Attend Milk Show Featured By Big Cheese, Farm Family and Milk Bar.

The second annual National Milk and Dairy Farm Exposition, held in New York city during the week of April 21st, was attended by 70,000 consumers. The armory was crowded afternoon and evening. The people of New York were greatly interested in the show and the big crowds indicate the success. People came from the lower east side, Fifth avenue and Broadway with little knowledge of the dairy industry and had pictured for them the complete story of milk from the time a meadow is seeded until a piece of cheese goes down with pie. A special program was arranged for each day in the week. There was Women's Day, Producers' Day and the 15,000 children present on Saturday told everyone of Children's Day.

One large cheese weighing 6,500 pounds was cut and sold in two days by the Department of Farms and Markets. The New York State College of Agriculture had in actual operation, ice cream, cheese and butter machinery. They also showed in complete detail the cost of production of milk. In order to do this they brought from Orange county a farmer, his wife, boy and hired man. City folks learned from these people the long and hard labor required to produce milk. There before the consumers' eyes were the labor, the feed, the investment, the cows, and in fact every item that enters into the cost of production. Consumers were amazed. They now have a better understanding of the dairy industry.

3,700 Drinks Sold Over Bar.

"Cow Slip Inn" was one of the real attractions of the show. Men visited the inn because of the feeling of familiarity. Women crowded around the bar out of a natural curiosity. Children bought a drink because the law did not forbid them there. The drinks were dangerous sounding and people looked in amazement until their eyes caught the words, "A Scene after July 1st." Old timers ordered a Holstein highball. Democrats favored the Bryan Special or the Daniels Extra Dry. Cream de Guernsey was ordered by the girls. Others chose a Cow's Neck, Slow Milk Fizzes, July 4th Skyrocket or a Jersey Lightning. While they all drank they had a foot on the brass rail. Everyone ate some crackers and cheese. So complete was the representation of the old time bar that the milk drinks, for all of the drinks were milk, were just as satisfying as fire water. True, there were humorous features about the bar but these were just "leads." After July 1st thousands of people will be looking for a new drink. 3,700 tried a milk drink, either plain or mixed, and when the dry weather comes they will order milk.

Cost Cards on the Table.

In addition to making this practical demonstration of the adaptability of milk as a national beverage, the Dairymen's League brought a typical dairy herd to New York to tell the story of the cost of production. Consumers were interested in the fact shown that during the last twelve months farmers received only 6 5c per quart while consumers paid 14.8c per quart for milk. To correct false impressions, it was shown that since 1913 the average of twenty-nine food commodities has increased 79 per cent while milk has increased only 73 per cent in cost to the consumer. Consumers went to the show expecting to find complete information regarding the milk problem. Cost of production was completely shown. Only one dealer exhibited at the show and nowhere could one find figures showing the cost of distribution. Consumers recognized the producers willingness to demonstrate costs. One of the greatest results of the show was to bring about a better understanding between producer and consumers. The dairy farmers of this section gained the confidence of the people of New York city.

HICKEY HURT.

Cornell Shop Foreman Fell From Trolley Car.

Thomas J. Hickey, foreman at the Cornell Steamboat Company plant on the Strand, is in the Kingston City Hospital from injuries received Sunday morning about 9:40 o'clock in a fall from a Kingston city trolley car. This morning at the hospital it was stated that his injuries did not appear to be as serious as first thought. No bones were found broken, but he was badly shaken up by the fall. The trolley car had stopped in front of William O'Reilly's store on Central Broadway. Evidently the conductor did not see Mr. Hickey step on the running board, and when the car started suddenly Mr. Hickey was jolted off and fell over backward to the brick pavement below. Harry Walker, of Maben & Walker, the druggists, and G. M. Wood, West Shore freight agent, picked him up and he was placed in the auto of Leon Blankfield and taken to the hospital. Edward McDonough was the conductor in charge of the trolley car.

TO BE HOME SOON

Says Captain of Jesse Williams's Company.

This letter is from Jesse Williams, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Williams of High Falls, N. Y., who is now serving with the Army of Occupation:

April 4, 1919.

Dear Mother—Just a line to say I am well and hope you are the same. Received your letter yesterday and was glad to hear from you all.

I presume Dan has gone to work on the road this summer.

Mother, our captain told us we would be on the way home some time this summer. I hope so, as I am getting good and sick of the army.

Did you get the paper I sent home, "The Watch on the Rhine." It is a good paper. I am going to send this paper to show you what we are doing on the front.

Why don't you write often. You have more to write about than I have. It is nice here today.

Is there much work around home this summer? Is father working every day? How does Arthur and his little wife get along?

Well mother dear I shall close. Hoping to hear from you soon or to see you.

Goodby and much love from your son to all.

YANKS ARE BUSY LETTER WRITERS

Home-Bound Mail From France Increased Enormously After Armistice.

SEND TONS OF SOUVENIRS

Post Offices at Bordeaux and Brest Have More Extensive Distribution Service Than Any Post Office in World—Mail Handled Quickly.

Washington.—Since the boys "over there" have stopped fighting they have taken to letter writing.

The home bound mail from France has increased enormously since the signing of the armistice and the parcel post has been a souvenir service. The value of souvenirs may be measured by the ton, consisting of small cases, parts of rifles and revolvers, bayonets, uniform buttons, and fragments of demolished airplanes.

A captured German helmet is the most prized token. Four or five hundred thousands of these have come through the mail since the war began, and the shipping requirements of the postal service were relaxed so that a large number have come through unwrapped.

The mail from the American forces in France is dispatched from two ports, Bordeaux and Brest.

During the month of November—the armistice having been signed on the 11th—17,615,400 letters were dispatched from Bordeaux, besides 2,816 sacks of papers; 5,419 sacks of customs packages and 26,089 pieces of registered mail, the whole volume amounting to 2874½ tons.

Busy Letter Writers.

The fight-freed boys got into full swing of letter writing during December and January, and for those months the amount of mail increased about 20 per cent over the plethoric month of November. One soldier wrote 30 letters in a single day. It is not known how many others equaled or surpassed this record. Frequently 12 to 15 letters are sent by each soldier.

It is likely to be some time before the home-bound mail from France grows less. As the number of boys coming home increases the impulse to write becomes stronger among those who remain. The regularly equipped post offices at Bordeaux and Brest, from which all mail from the expeditionary forces to the United States is dispatched, have the most extensive distribution service of any post office in the world. While a larger volume of mail is carried by the New York and Chicago offices, their fields of distribution are more restricted. From Bordeaux mail is dispatched to every state in the Union and to every city, town, hamlet and rural route.

Mr. Richard N. Bird, who was detailed by the post office department to take general charge of the offices at Bordeaux and Brest, has recently returned from France and his report of the work over there is full of interest.

Mail leaving this country addressed to the expeditionary forces in France passes out of the jurisdiction of the post office department into that of the army when it leaves the port of debarkation at New York. The army collects the soldiers' mail through approximately 150 army post offices scattered throughout France, making the letters up in packages by states, and delivers it to the officials of the post office department at Bordeaux and Brest. Before being dispatched to the United States all mail is sorted at Bordeaux or Brest and made up for direct dispatch to cities and railway mail routes in this country.

Every bit of mail is cleaned up to the very minute of sailing, and choice between sending it by a slower boat or by a faster boat that may sail a day later is determined by the time scheduled for the boats to arrive in New York. The boat to arrive first is given the mail in preference to sending it a day ahead by a slower boat. Approximately 25 dispatches, or one every day except Sunday, are made from either Bordeaux or Brest each month, and the time to New York is about ten days, with an infrequent delay of a day or two due to storms or accident.

Sent Direct to Trains.

Sacks or sacks when received in New York are sent direct to the [illegible] cars and dispatched on [illegible] to the routes or cities for which they are labeled. About 85 per cent of mail is handled in this way.

The soldiers' mail handled with substantial permanency since the signing of the armistice, there is no delay in the distribution of mail on the other side by the army except where it is improperly addressed or the unit to which it is addressed is one selected to return to the United States. In the latter case the mail is held on this side. Whenever any mail from the army post offices is delayed reaching Bordeaux or Brest, the date of the postmark on these envelopes is noted by [illegible] on the delayed letters.

The size of the Bordeaux terminal post office is on the same scale as the dispatch. The building is 250 feet long and 75 feet wide and is well equipped and lighted. It was built by the United States army engineers from plans submitted by Mr. Bird. It has every convenience for employees, and every special device for the proper handling of mail. Provision is made for three separations of letter mail and one separation of parcel mail.

Through the Looking Glass

By EVELYN NESBIT

One of woman's exclusive prerogatives is the right to have the blues. A great many of us dote on the privilege, and spend hours in company with perfumed handkerch hours in a dark corner, by ourselves. does the appear gloomy than when we look upon it from that dim, dark corner.

If we were little children someone would have the right to spank us for indulging this privilege. But being grown we may make ourselves and others miserable and uncomfortable without hindrance. We may even invite sympathizers to participate in our feast of sniffles and tears.

But stay a moment. See the delicious wrinkles that creep up our noses and into our cheeks. See the dark circles under our eyes and the cold welcome we give to hubby when he comes home at night tired and overworked. Those are the after-effects that are sure to result from this feminine pastime.

We are then no better than the intoxicated man who stumbles home from the ginmill. And it all comes as a result of foolish self-indulgence that is no more praiseworthy than the self-indulgence of the drunkard. For you know we have not been sorrowing. Sorrow does not creep into the dim, dark corners and mope. We have merely had the blues.

Drop your blues, ladies. They are a pose. Get out of your dim, dark corners—the sooner the better—and look into the sunlight. Open the windows wide and breathe deeply. Watch the glooms fade away. And if it happens to be raining, all the better. Inhale the delicious smell of the sky's tears. If that's not enough to chase the blues, get out into the open for fifteen minutes, rain or shine. Get some oxygen into your stupid lungs, and then buckle down to some real, live work. You'll mark the difference at once.

WHEN MILADY HAS HER REST

Should Have Comfortable, Loose and Flowing Robe, Allowing Freedom of Movement.

Health rules all prescribe rest periods as indispensable to a woman's day if she would maintain her mental vigor and physical elasticity and prolong to its proper limits the very capacity for activity in which she so prides herself, and, indeed, upon which she may be depending for her livelihood.

The ability to relax completely and at will, and to remain so for a short time, is an art, but one that can be cultivated, providing the effort to attain it be persisted in by habitual practice.

A prime essential to this rest period, as every truly feminine soul will attest, is suitable habiliment. In this connection—which might, however, be said of every sartorial connection—it suitably includes comfort and grace. To be comfortable the robe must be loose, flowing, allowing full freedom of movement, and complete relaxation to the mobile muscles.

But this looseness of line and freedom from restraining bonds is not incompatible with grace and comeliness. On the contrary, if treated right, it is conducive to both.

VEST POPULAR FOR SPRING

KAISER AUTHOR OF WAR, STATES MONACO PRINCE

Absolutely Wished It, and Conducted It Himself in All Its Barbarity.

"There is no doubt that the former German emperor was the first and responsible author of the war. He absolutely wished for it and conducted it himself in all its ruthlessness and barbarity."

This is a statement attributed to the prince of Monaco by the London Mail's Paris correspondent, who interviewed the prince there. The correspondent recalls that the prince of Monaco was formerly a personal friend of Emperor William, but that friendship was severed by the prince in a telegram sent to the former emperor in September, 1914.

"Until a few years before the war," the prince is quoted as saying, "the German emperor seemed to sincerely wish peace and a renewal of intercourse with France. I know this because I was intrusted with a mission to try to bring it about. But at the same time a terrible megalomania was growing in him. He was anxious to see Germany over all, and from the day when he felt it impossible to attain this end by peace, war became an obsession with him.

"I shall never forget the fury in his face and hatred in his voice when, in July, 1914, he told me 'if they oblige me to make war the world will see what it never dreamed of.' These words were hypocritical, because the emperor could not pretend the war into which he declared himself driven was not at that very time being prepared for in every detail."

JOKER SCARES PASSENGERS

Calls "Police," and Bottles Are Tossed Into River.

A practical joker yelled in the car door of an Illinois Central train as it was crossing the Wabash river near the state line of Illinois and Iowa, "Boys, there's an officer on the train."

Nearly every window went up with a bang, and all manner of parcels went flying into the river. When the victims discovered they had been despoiled of their high-priced liquor they got hold of him in the smoker and he was given some of what the marines call "treat 'em rough."

State and federal officers are watching the border for a hundred miles and automobile loads of liquor are seized almost daily. Despite this the bootleggers persist, induced by the large profits, as much as $600 and $700 being possible from a flivver load.

BUFFALO STOPS TRAIN

Gets Off Ranch and Runs Ahead of Locomotive.

The ferry train between Pierre and Fort Pierre, S. D., was compelled to stop when a young buffalo bull, which had been running ahead of the train, turned about and planted himself on the bridge crossing the Missouri River.

Efforts to dislodge the animal for a time were fruitless, but finally certain intrepid members of the crew attacked and caused the bull to leap from the embankment at the approach, rolling to the base of the steep incline.

Owners of herds north of Fort Pierre have been experiencing difficulty in keeping the animals within bounds and it has been necessary to kill some of the straying animals that have menaced residents of this region.

SEALS LURED BY MUSIC

Commission Hunter Used a Phonograph and a Rifle.

Phonograph music lured scores of seals of the Lower Puget Sound to their death last summer, according to Ed. Corfee, who killed seals that prey upon salmon.

Corfee is a hunter employed by the Washington fish and game commission.

A phonograph and a rifle were the principal items in Corfee's outfit. The seals came out of the water to listen to the music. Whenever a seal put his head above the surface Corfee's rifle spoke and the seal dropped. Each seal is said to be able to destroy $1,000 worth of salmon a year.

Girl Handles Pianos.

Muscles don't always bulge. A young woman in a freight office at Butte, Mont., resembles a sixteen-year-old boy in her working clothes. In her "off-hour" dress she is very much a woman, a woman of piercing appearance. She weighs only 120 pounds, is 5 feet 4 inches tall and has small feet and hands. To pick up a 900-pound piano with her truck and run off with it is play for this Amazon, says the delighted foreman.

Booming Victory Gardens.

The National Federation of Construction Industries is preparing to campaign for victory gardening in connection with the "war-at-home" plans being furthered all over the country this year, it was announced in a report to the national war garden commission.

A Camera Click

By JESSIE ETHEL SHERWIN

(Copyright, 1919, by Western Newspaper Union.)

A gaping crowd stood transfixed as, coming down the fire escape of a city skyscraper, a man fell the length of a one-story steel ladder. Immediately, two flights higher up a policeman appeared. The lowermost man, suggesting a refugee, had regained his feet and continued a rapid descent. The officer fired. Once, twice, thrice the short, snappy shots rang out. The fugitive staggered, but managed to descend to where the ladder ended.

A woman in the staring street crowd screamed. Others turned pale, some only excited. A man stuck his head out of the open window of an office right beside the fugitive, stared blankly and for a moment his startled face was in full view.

"He's hit!" cried some one as the man swung to the last ladder rung and dropped to the sidewalk.

"Why, it's only a movie!" announced a second voice and pointed to where, at a window in an opposite structure, a motion-picture machine and its operator were visible.

The man at the window, who must have been plainly caught in the picture, viewed the dispersing throng casually and drew back into his office. He was not a prepossessing looking individual as to features. His face showed shrewdness and was hardened and repulsive. Across one cheek, noticeable even at a distance, was a splotch, or scar. The reminder of a wound or a birthmark, it stood out, tale-telling and prominent. He was dressed with expensive ostentation and wore a great diamond scarfpin, and he suggested the typical broker whose ways are "easy money" ways and whose methods are sinuous and obscure.

In a little town three hundred miles away a man was waiting to see that picture, a part of the chronicle of a criminal's life. He did not know that he was waiting, he never anticipated such a presentation, but fate, circumstance were destined to bring about a situation which was to mend a broken life and furnish a clue the prospect of which he had long since abandoned.

He was Robert Brill and two years previous he had been happy, prosperous and getting ready to wed a beautiful young girl. The cashier of a bank at Alton, he had one day been left in charge by its president who was to be absent for two days visiting a branch institution at a distance. It was less than an hour after the departure of that official when a man entered the bank whom Brill had never seen before.

"Mr. Warden about?" he inquired airily and with an easy air of familiarity as if to indicate that he was acquainted with the president of the institution. Brill explained the absence of his chief. The visitor looked vexed. He stood chewing the end of an unlighted cigar, reflecting.

"Too bad!" he observed, after a pause. "I could wait till later in the day, but not until tomorrow. I have an important deal on and a few days since I deposited some bonds on a trust receipt. There were fifty thousand dollars of them. Mr. Warden was to hold them, as I expected their sale. My client has changed his mind, and I have a new prospect. Just get them for me, will you? And figure out the regular one-eighth of a cent commission for your trusteeship."

The speaker drew a receipt from his pocket signed by the banker and evidencing the deposit he announced. Brill had heard Mr. Warden speak of the transaction, but had not been at hand when the deposit had been made. He went to the vault and found the sealed package in question bearing a card which held a signature. Brill made out a receipt which the man signed. The young cashier compared it with the signature on the card. The signatures were apparently identical. He calculated the commission on the transactions. This his visitor paid, tossed Brill a cigar, placed the bonds in his pocket, nodded pleasantly and went away.

Two days later the man who had originally deposited the bonds as identified by the bank president, appeared. He professed the utmost amazement at the fraud that had been practiced on the institution. He had been robbed of his pocketbook, which contained the bank receipt, but the bank was responsible for having delivered the bonds to the forger. It paid the large amount involved and Brill was discharged, to become a wanderer whom no other bank would employ.

Esther Davies remained true to him and they planned to marry when Brill had saved up a little surplus and go to some remote district where the bond incident would not follow him. One evening Brill entered a motion-picture playhouse. The film under exhibition depicted the career of a noted criminal. It showed his escape down the fire escape of a great city building. It showed, too, a face at a window, a scarred face that Brill instantly recognized. He could scarcely suppress a great shout as he hastily left the show, filled with the most unmanning pale excitement.

Within one week Robert Brill had located the city building, had learned that the forger and the real owner of the bonds were indebted at the vanishing act and in collusion. The law stepped in, recovery of the amount paid by the bank was secured, restored to his old position and wedded to Esther, the dark days were succeeded by others of brightness and promise.

FIELD MARSHAL HAIG GOES BACK TO GOLF

For the last four years Field Marshal Douglas Haig's time has been taken up with directing the British army against the Hun, but now that the armistice has been signed Sir Douglas Haig is spending most of his spare time playing his favorite game, golf. Sir Douglas Haig is here shown leaving the golf club after participating in a game.

MATCHES FOR THE YANKS

Knights of Columbus Keep the Boys Over There Supplied.

It's one thing to supply the doughboys with free smokes, but quite another for the boys to light them comfortably now that they are in Germany, where matches are not as plentiful as they used to be before the war. There are the "wait-a-minute" and "die-hard" matches, so named by the British Tommies because, unless a fellow wants to be gassed by the raw sulphur of the tips, he has to wait until the sulphur is expended and the wood of the match begins burning before he can light his cigarette, cigar or pipe.

This being the case, the Knights of Columbus have sent and are sending regular American book matches to the boys with the army of occupation. An order for 2,000,000 books of matches was recently placed by the Knights so that the boys abroad will be able to get their smokes without risking gas poisoning by using the European grade of lucifers.

GIVES TELEPHONE FIGURES

One in Every Nine Persons in Country Has Instrument.

Washington D. C.—The number of telephones in use in the United States at the close of the calendar year 1917 was 11,713,223—one to every nine persons, or every two families; and the number of calls made during the year is estimated at 21,342,000,000, an average of more than 200 for every man, woman and child in the country. These are among the interesting features of a preliminary report on the telephone industry of the United States, just made public by Director Samuel L. Rogers of the bureau of the census, department of commerce. This report was prepared under the supervision of Mr. Eugene F. Hartley, chief statistician for manufactures.

STOCK ATE WEEDS

Many Head of Them Were Poisoned and Died.

Losses of hundreds of sheep and cattle by stock raisers in San Juan county, New Mexico, were explained when the county agent discovered the whirled milk weed and its poisonous properties. The agent pointed out the plant to farmers and stockmen. Several meetings were held to plan how to meet the danger and committees were appointed to inspect every part of La Plata district, which includes 20,000 acres. By helping the stockmen to locate and avoid the weed, the agent hopes that serious loss will be avoided.

A SAFE BRIDGE

THE CALL OF OLD GLORY.

Soft whispers the breeze over valley and crag
As it murmurs Goodnight to America's flag.
And America's flag takes the breeze to her breast
And calls to her children from East coast to West:

"You have sent forth your sons, your knights and my own!
On many a field their clean valor was shown!
Of home was their dreaming—in God was their trust—
And the hordes of the Prussian were trampled to dust!

"And now you must pay, since the good fight is won,
To conclude the grand story so bravely begun!
Your last full devotion is now to be shown:
SUBSCRIBE TO THE VICTORY LIBERTY LOAN!"

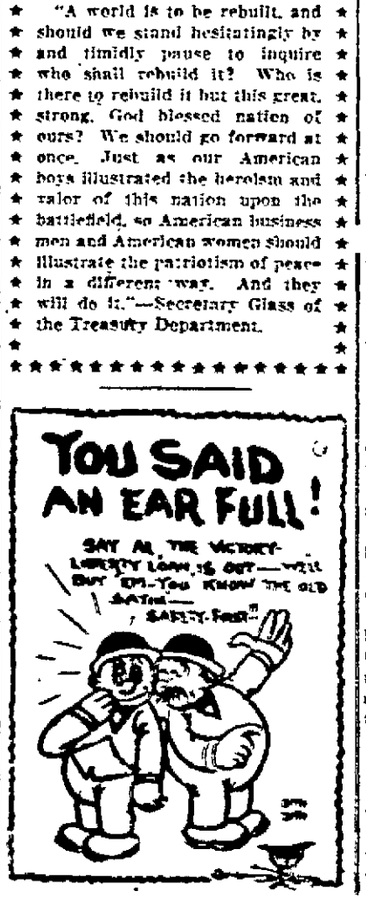
Soft whispers the breeze over valley and crag
As it kisses the folds of America's flag.
And America's flag takes the breeze to her breast
And smiles on her children from East coast to West.

—WILLIAM E. KIRK.

Not the Shadow of a Doubt.

A LOAN TO REBUILD THE WORLD.

"A world is to be rebuilt, and should we stand hesitatingly by and timidly pause to inquire who shall rebuild it? Who is there to rebuild it but this great, strong, God blessed nation of ours? We should go forward at once. Just as our American boys illustrated the heroism and valor of this nation upon the battlefield, so American business men and American women should illustrate the patriotism of peace in a different way. And they will do it."—Secretary Glass of the Treasury Department.



"VICTORY PANORAMA" READY TO BE PRESENTED

Work of American Army to Be Shown in Great Spectacle in New York May 3.

Everything is in readiness in New York city for the great event of the Victory Liberty Loan campaign, the "Panorama of Victory, Staged by Your Army," on Fifth avenue, Saturday afternoon, May 3. Officers of the regular army, who are completing mobilization of men and material for the procession, are confident the spectacle will show buyers of Victory Notes and visitors to the city virtually everything the army did during the war and how money was spent to help end the fighting.

All branches of the service will be represented in the line of march. Floats that show actual battle scenes, the training of soldiers, and care of wounded will be in the parade. All types of artillery, tanks, aeroplanes, field kitchens will be shown. Eighty bands will play martial airs, and men of the infantry, cavalry, field artillery, engineers and other branches of the service will have places in the panorama.

The signal for the start will be given shortly after 1 o'clock in the afternoon, and it is expected that it will take four hours for the parade to pass a given point. The line of march will be down Fifth avenue from One Hundred and Tenth street to Washington Square, a distance of five miles.

Governor Smith; the governors of New Jersey and Connecticut, federal officials and army officers will review the parade. Lieut. Col. Bernard Lentz, General Staff, U. S. A., is directing the work of the Army Committee of sixty officers in charge of displays of their particular branches.

Prominent in the "Panorama of Victory" will be the Medical Division, in charge of Col. F. M. Hartsock, Medical Corps, U. S. Army. This will consist of at least five hundred U. S. Regular Army Nurses, just back from service in base hospitals in France. Many of the women who will parade were with mobile and field hospitals and under fire many times. Several have been decorated for bravery. Ambulance companies, field hospitals, litter bearers, floats depicting actual scenes in dugouts near the front will also be in the Medical Division.

The Chemical Warfare Service, an entirely new branch of the army, will be represented in the panorama by floats showing the manufacture of gas, work by troops in defending themselves and when attacking.

"Gas is the newest thing in war and is the most secret thing in war," said Lieut. Col. Amos A. Fries, in charge of the Division of Chemical Warfare Service. "The general public knows less of it than of any other development of the war department. German gas caused three out of every ten casualties we had in the war, and yet the German was only a piker with gas. He relied 'kamerad' on its use nearly a year before the war closed."

The ordnance department will exhibit every type of ordnance material manufactured in the United States, either in the parade or in Van Cortlandt Park. Railway artillery and heavy ordnance will be moved in Van Cortlandt Park, where the encampment of the army has been established and where exhibitions—"shows" of actual fighting—will take place.

TRIAL CHANGED TO THIS COUNTY

An action was brought by Louis Krohnberg of New York city against Albert Smith and Frederick Holstein of Kingston to recover $985 damages on account of an automobile accident which occurred in June last. Krohnberg was the owner of a Pierce Arrow car and claims that the defendants so carelessly drove their car that there was a collision between the Pierce Arrow and the other car, causing the damage above named. The place of trial in the papers was fixed in New York county and the plaintiff was represented by Abram Pariser, a New York lawyer. The defendants employed Brinnier, Canfield & Brinnier as their attorneys and they recently made a motion to change the place of trial from New York county to Ulster county, and the matter was argued a week ago by ex-Mayor William D. Brinnier in New York city before Mr. Justice Weeks, who filed a decision on Saturday granting the motion to change the place of trial to Ulster county.

Two Speeders Caught.

Just before Motorcycle Cop Andy Walker was injured Sunday, as told elsewhere, he arrested Harry Nichols of East Orange, and Benjamin H. Stanton of New York, both for driving their cars over 25 miles an hour. They furnished bail in the sum of $10 for their appearance in court today. When their cases were called they failed to appear and Judge Schirick forfeited the bail.

Fed-Tapeism.

A young detective was enthusiastic but inexperienced. Rushing into his chief's office in great excitement, he cried, "I've found the murderer! I've got him cornered so that he can't escape!" The chief regarded him with withering scorn. "Allow me," he said, "to draw your attention to the fact that at present we are looking, not for the murderer, but for clews!"

Their Surprising Way.

"I was never more disappointed in anybody in my life than I was in my cousins up to Kay See," admitted Gabe Goshell of Grudge, who was just back from a visit to the Big Burg. "Why, with everything on earth going on and anything you could think of liable to happen at any moment, I'll be switched if they don't poke off to bed at between nine and ten o'clock every night of the world!"—Kansas City Star.

HE MIGHT.

Magistrate—In this last collision of yours you tore off a piece of a man's ear. I shall have to put you under bonds to keep the peace.

Taking the Chase Out of Purchase

Advertising benefits the man who buys as well as the man who sells. It is part of the Golden Rule of Business and it works both ways.

Don't miss the advertisements in this newspaper. Many of them are interesting just because of their news and educational value alone.

But more than that:—Advertisements take the chase out of purchase and make every penny do its full duty.

This last statement is one particularly to be remembered when common-sense economy is not only a national duty, but an individual necessity.

AUTO BILL HEARING.

Knight-Wheelock Measure of Importance to Car Owners.

Local automobilists are interested in a hearing that was held before Governor Alfred E. Smith at Albany today on the Knight-Wheelock bill, which proposes to increase the fees of operators and also calls for an examination. There will be another hearing May 13, at 2 o'clock, and concerns the propsed change and increasing of automobile registration fees in this state. The bill is of vital interest to auto owners.

The proposed measure, which will undoubtedly bring forth plenty of opposition, makes the fee of 25 cents per horse power 10 cents for each $100 valuation of a car. After a car is three years old, the valuation is reduced to 25 cents per $100, and after five years to 10 per cent per $100. At the present time, the receipts of the state's motor vehicle bureau are divided equally between the state and the counties, the money being used for improving the highways, except that portion which goes to New York city and reverts to the general fund. The bill, in its present form, changes this division of fees so that the state will receive 75 per cent and the counties 25 per cent.

Lion's Victim is Ferris.

Investigation here, says the Newburgh News, leads to the belief that the man, "John Henry," who was killed by a lion with Cook Brothers' circus in Woodbury, N. J., was John Henry Ferris, one of the six colored men who entered the army from Newburgh September 25, 1918. He came north three years ago and was employed for a year at Boston. In July of last year he came to Kingston and later was inducted into service.

"THE PRICE OF PEACE" REVEALS WAR SECRETS

Official Victory Loan Film Is an Inspiring Record of General Pershing's Army.

Some of the most carefully guarded secrets concerning the military movements of the United States during the great war have been released by the Federal censor. The pictorial record of the war, as shown by official photographs, taken under supervision of the government, is now revealed to the public in the great war film, "THE PRICE OF PEACE."

This is the official motion picture authorized by the Treasury Department for use in the Victory Liberty Loan drive.

There is no phase of the war that is not covered by the pictures shown, from the scene in President Wilson's office when he signed the declaration of war, April 6, 1917, to a remarkable view of the Statue of Liberty in the lower New York Harbor taken when the troops were returning home.

Mobilization of the great National Army, the departure of the boys on the transports from the ports of embarkation, showing such mighty ships as the Leviathan with 10,000 troops aboard, moving silently away from the piers toward France, the bustling movements of the saucy but terrible destroyers, the great battleships steaming out to meet whatever might have been in waiting, the landing in France, the march to the camp and the constant flow of the troops to the other side, convoyed by the great warships so secretly that hardly a breath of the movement reached the enemy's ears—all these are shown.

Then there are pictured also stirring scenes in Belleau Wood, where the Marine Corps checked the German charge; at Chateau Thierry, where the foe was hurled back by American bayonets, and the battle scenes around St. Mihiel, where Pershing's men drew a deadly noose around the German advance. The fighting in the Argonne, with its desperate attacks and counter attacks, is vividly portrayed. More peaceful scenes are also shown in the views of the Americans marching down the Valley of the Rhine after the armistice, their Christmas festivities and the preparations of some of the units for their home going and finally their arrival home.

One of the most thrilling views is that of the boys, after their months of intensive training, getting ready to go over the top on that eventful morning on July 18, when they deployed out into the wheat fields at 4:45 o'clock in the morning. Other impressive scenes show a fight between airmen, the fall of the enemy and the destruction of a "sausage" balloon.

Not the least interesting are the pictures of the "Big Berthas," which failed to demoralize the French, and of the surrender of the German High Sea Fleet.

The whole comprises a complete pictorial history of the war, and the only appeal made for the loan is a brief one by Secretary Glass. It is a record of gallant deeds superbly performed, impressive and inspiring.

Friendship That Lasts.

Friendship is apt to creep away into some corner of the temple on whose shrine love has descended. This mild affection is but a twinkling taper that will burn steadily on, perhaps unseen amid the dazzling glory of love's supernatural lamp, to be found shining benignantly when the lamp is shattered.

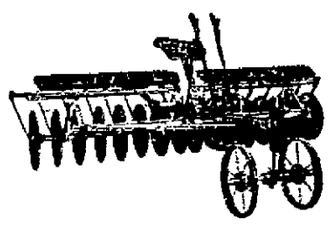
Tillage Implements That Count



Massey-Harris No. 22 Disc Harrow

are those that give you a real service both in the quality of their work and in the length of their life.

Massey-Harris Spring Tooth Harrow

MASSEY-HARRIS HARROWS AND DRILLS

Are of that kind. They are the outgrowth of nearly 70 years of experience in implement building and embody the latest and most approved principles for advantageous operation. No more efficient Disc than the Massey-Harris No. 28 has yet been conceived. Built as it is, with a hot riveted angle steel frame, wood bearings of an improved type, and a centre pressure device that gives you positive control of the cutting depth, it furnishes equipment that meets the requirement in every respect. Equally as good tools are found in the Massey-Harris Spring Tooth Harrow and in the Massey-Harris No. 12 Drill, both of which will help you considerably in your Spring operations. The Harrow has removable steel shoes or runners that are of a higher carbon, and accordingly more wear resisting, than those usually employed in harrows of its type. The Drill is noted for its accurate sowing, double force feed grain runs, its substantial construction and its convenience of operation. 52 changes of the feed from each side of its grain runs and 56 changes of its fertilizer feed are available without using extra parts.

OLIVER CHILLED PLOWS

Also, are among the tools that count in the service they render. The extreme hardness of their chilled metal, combined with the unequalled uniformity of its temper which is produced in the act of forming, and the perfect outline of the mouldboards which causes the unusual durability. Furthermore, they are remarkably light in draft, handle easily and produce work that always pleases. Both of these lines.

AMERICA'S IMMORTALS

ARTHUR J. FORREST,
Sergeant, Co. D, 354th Infantry.

Sergeant Forrest received the Distinguished Service Cross for conspicuous gallantry in action with the enemy near Remonville, France, November 1, 1918. While the progress of his company was held up by a rain of fire from six enemy machine guns, Sergeant Forrest alone went forward, working his way to within fifty yards of the nest before being discovered. Turning the nest, he drove out the entire company in disorder, killing one with his rifle. His home is in Hannibal, Mo.
